FRENCH STAND MAY KILL PARLEY

Administration Against an Abortive Inquiry.

REPORTS DISTURB OFFICIALS

Announced at White House That the United States Will Refuse to Participate in Proposed Reparations Conference Unless It Is Permitted to Inquire Into Germany's Capacity to Pay.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The United States will refuse to participate in the proposed reparations conference unless it is permitted to inquire into Germany's capacity to pay.

This statement was made by an authorized spokesman for the government, who added: "It never has been our intention that the delegates to the conference should conduct an abortive and limited inquiry."

Premier Poincare then, if press reports from Paris are verified, seemingly succeeded in imposing a condition to which this government will not give its assent, when he said: "Let it (the reparations conference) not attempt either to change decisions already taken regarding the total amount of our credits, or engage in future attempts indefinitely."

The spokesman declared that all previous official utterances of the French premier could be squared with the terms upon which it is proposed to hold the conference. It was asserted if the government is notified officially that the conference must not investigate Germany's reparation paying ability, it will not be worth while to agree to American participation.

The state department is without word from France that Poincare has refused any reparations inquiry, but officials obviously were disturbed by the cable dispatches coming through unofficial channels.

Officials now admit that it looks very much as though Poincare is following deliberately the policy of piling condition on condition until Great Britain and the United States give up all hope of reducing Germany's war bill through international agreement.

Poincare's present tactics, it is claimed, go much further than was intended by those who drafted the Versailles treaty. Paragraph 13 of Annex 11, Chapter 8, of that treaty, it was stated, specifies that the reparations total fixed should not be changed except by unanimous consent of all nations concerned.

The American and British governments, the spokesman explained, have accepted the principle that the reparations sum due France, Belgium and Italy can not be reduced without their consent. In order to present a proposal for their consideration and possible approval, it is first necessary to formulate it and to do that an inquiry must be held.

The state department now has before it for consideration several more or less formal communications from foreign governments. The nature of the communications was not disclosed by officials, but apparently they are not of a nature that precludes hope of holding the conference.

HAS TALK WITH FORD

Inventor Sperry Would Fill the Air With Flying Flyers.

New York, Nov. 2.—Lawrence B. Sperry, who invented the world's smallest flying machine, which weighs less than a ton and goes 100 miles an hour and a half gallons of gasoline, believes his infant flyer will replace the land hugging Lizzie and can be parked in the kitchen if necessary. He has discussed the manufacture of the plane with Henry Ford who showed enough interest to predict the motor can be built for $50. However, Ford has not intimated his intention of peppering the sky with these three cylinder air-cooler Sperry machines. "If Ford's figures are true we can put this machine on the market for less than $1,000," Sperry said.

The little plane rides the air bumps at less than fifteen horsepower and does 100 miles an hour with ease. As it soars and glides like a bird, Sperry smokes his pipe or reads his favorite magazine.

Receiver of Klan Refused.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 2.—Judge J. D. Humphreys denied a petition to have a receiver appointed for the Ku Klux Klan organization in the suit brought by David Rittenhouse and others, who contended Klan money was being squandered. Judge Humphreys dismissed the suit.

DR. H. V. ARNY

New President of American Pharmaceutical Association.

RADIO TESTS MADE KNOWN

Power Generated in New York Transmitted to Warsaw.

New York, Nov. 2.—New and startling inventions in wireless telegraphy by which scientists hope to produce radio power that will run all the engines of the earth became known through the Radio Corporation of America. Power generated in New York has been transmitted at the rate of 136,000 miles a second to Warsaw—and this same power operated a wireless transmitting set in the Polish metropolis. Even more astounding is the fact that this power was automatically relayed back to New York, without human intervention. It is 4,200 miles from this city to Warsaw.

Further tests, under the supervision of Dr. E. F. Alexanderson of Schenectady, chief engineer of the Radio Corporation, show that radio signals generated here were made to "loop-the-loop" from New York to Warsaw and return, forty times. The electrostatic waves, therefore, traveled 368,000 miles, with theoretical stops at each end of the line, before their energy was lost in the ether.

WOMAN TESTIFIES AT BLACKMAIL TRIAL

Alleged Remarks of Corcoran Quoted by Witness.

Boston, Nov. 2.—Mrs. Mary Louise Lyons, former stenographer for William J. Corcoran, ex-district attorney of Middlesex county, testified at the alleged blackmail ring trial that she overheard her employer tell other defendants in the case that some one had been given a bad scare on the night before and that they were going to "shake down" that some one for a large sum of money.

The alleged remarks of Corcoran were made in the office of the General Drug company, of which the former prosecutor was an official in 1919. Mrs. Lyons said that the men addressed by Corcoran were J. Warren Kane, Michael J. Lyons and Attorney Harry E. Levenson. Other persons charged with complicity in extorting thousands of dollars from wealthy men in Boston by the badger game were frequent visitors at the office, she declared.

Attorney John F. McDonald, counsel for John L. Donovan, the Boston leather merchant, who was "shaken down" for $17,500 by the alleged members of the ring, testified that he protested to District Attorney Pelletier, who was later expelled from office for malfeasance in office, that the trapping of his client in the apartment of Theresa Duggan, the alleged lure of the "ring," was blackmail. Pelletier merely promised to "take care of the case when it came up," McDonald said. The case was the threatened application for a warrant charging Donovan, a married man, with a statutory offense by Attorney Levenson.

MAY DISCONTINUE COMMUNICATION

Stresemann to Move Against Rebellious Bavaria.

MILITARY SITUATION TENSE

Private Armies in Bavaria of Hitler, Erhardt and Rossbach Reported Concentrating on the Thuringia Border—Rival National Government to Berlin May Be Proclaimed. Socialists' Ultimatum Considered.

Berlin, Nov. 2.—Having put down the Saxon "reds," Dictator Stresemann, it is now declared, is considering measures against rebellious Bavaria.

The first measure contemplated is the shutting off of salaries of all government employees in Bavaria and shutting down on money to the Bavaria banks. Should that not suffice to bring Bavaria to its senses, the posts and telegraphs to Bavaria will be discontinued, and as a last resort the railways.

The reichswehr ministry says that the orders to the national army are to fight if the Bavarians cross the line. It is generally recognized that that would be the signal for the beginning of civil war.

For several days sensational rumors have been reaching Berlin that something like mobilization is going on in Bavaria of Hitler's, Erhardt's, Rossbach's and other feudal like private armies, and that they are concentrating on the Thuringia border. Reports created the fear that the irregular Bavarian organizations, including the "fighting leagues," might be tempted to cross into Thuringia. Two regiments of infantry, with some artillery and machine guns, are reported near the line.

Rumors are also flying thick that Dictator Von Kahr, Adolf Hitler and General Ludendorff are contemplating proclaiming a rival national government to Berlin, imitating the Turks by creating a German "Austria."

Dictator Stresemann is confined to his bed by some difficulty with his heart, due to the strain of recent days. If the Socialists withdraw from the cabinet, it is said that Stresemann is working out a plan for the creation of a directorate of three members. The cabinet decided to postpone its decision on acceptance or rejection of the conditions named by the Socialists under which they will remain in the cabinet.

Fearing that concentration of Bavarian irregular military organizations of the numerous "private armies" on the northern border of Bavaria presages a Bavarian invasion of "red" Thuringia, General Von Seeckt telegraphed orders to General Mueller, commanding some 50,000 of the reichswehr in Saxony, to prepare to send troops to the Thuringia-Bavarian frontier.

COCHRAN VANQUISHED

Defeated by Hagenlacher, German Champion, in Billiard Tourney.

New York, Nov. 2.—An upset occurred in the world's 132 ballline billiards tourney when Erich Hagenlacher, the German champion, beat Welker Cochran, the California star, who vanquished Willie Hoppe, Hagenlacher, who defeated Roger Conti, the French champion, Wednesday, came through to victory by the margin of 500 to 323 points over Cochran.

Willie Hoppe, world's billiard champion, defeated Edouard Horemans, the champion of Belgium. After the Belgian had scored a record run of 241, making the count 415 to 323, Hoppe came from behind and won, 500 to 435.

Young Jake Schaefer, favored by many to win, scored his second victory in two matches by defeating Roger Conti, champion of France, 500 to 343. It was the third loss for Conti in as many engagements, and as good as eliminated him in the titular hunt.

Columbus, Nov. 2.—A chase of 2,000 miles across the country came to an end in federal court here when Clarence J. Smithling, about 28, said to be from Syracuse, N. Y., was sent to the Franklin county jail in default of $3,000 bond, after being arrested on a warrant sworn out by Howard H. Corbin, Syracuse, charging white slavery. Smithling was alleged to have departed from Syracuse Oct. 8 last with Corbin's wife, Mrs. Florence Mabel Corbin, in an automobile. The husband, accompanied by Dr. John T. Fokes, Syracuse, a brother of Mrs. Corbin, followed them.

The suit was brought by the boy's father, Anthony Stegeman. Seven children were killed in the accident.

Hotel Held Up.

Cleveland, Nov. 2.—Two bandits held up guests and a clerk in the lobby of the Huron hotel here. They forced the guests to sit on a long bench in the lobby and turn their pockets out. They made Earl Clinton, the clerk, open the cash register, which they looted. Clinton told police the bandits got $100 from the register and about $100 from the guests.

CLERK PASSED ON MERIT OF CLAIM

Payment of Fee to Architect O'Brien Probed at Inquiry.

HINES HAD DISAPPROVED IT

President Coolidge Declined to Arbitrate the Controversy Between O'Brien and the Veterans' Bureau Over Validity of Claim—Mysterious Pencil Memorandum Found That Remains Unexplained.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The veterans' bureau investigation revealed these facts in connection with the payment of the $33,000 claim of Matthew O'Brien, San Francisco architect:

The claim was allowed and payment made by the general accounting office on an ex-parte showing of attorneys for the claimant. No effort was made to ascertain the facts on which Director Frank T. Hines of the veterans' bureau acted when he disapproved the claim and so notified the general accounting office.

President Coolidge, within 30 days, declined to arbitrate the controversy between O'Brien and the veterans' bureau on the validity of the claim, advising that it should take its course through the general accounting office and the court of claims, since Director Hines had disapproved it.

The supposed merits of the claim were passed on by a 23-year-old clerk in the general accounting office. The findings of this clerk were approved and the payment was made on the authority of a law clerk without reference to any higher authority in the general accounting office.

A mysterious pencil memorandum found in the file on this claim remains unexplained. This memorandum was a calculation of 49 per cent of $3,300, the results being $1,320. Chairman Reed of the investigating committee said of this: "The amount of this claim was $33,000. Ten per cent of that is $3,300. Somebody has been figuring on what is 49 per cent of this amount."

SLAYER EXECUTED

Convicted of the Murder of a Schoolboy Near Dayton.

Columbus, Nov. 2.—Irvin Laver of Montgomery county, convicted of the murder of Arthur Moore, a 14-year-old schoolboy of Dayton, in 1922, paid the supreme penalty for his crime by electrocution at the Ohio state penitentiary at an early hour today. Laver was known as the "rabbit man" around Dayton, as it was on the pretext of giving the Moore boy a rabbit that he was lured into the woods near Dayton, where the murder was committed. Two stays of execution of sentence were granted Laver before final decision in the case was rendered by the supreme court a few days ago, the court setting the date of his electrocution for Nov. 2.

Arbuckle Sued For Divorce.

DERIES ALL CHARGES

Mrs. Stokes on the Witness Stand in the Divorce Suit.

New York, Nov. 2.—Helen Ellwood Stokes denied on the stand all evidence offered by her husband in his divorce suit tending to show that she was not fit to care for her two children.

"I was never in Mr. Wallace's apartment in my life," she declared, speaking of the New York home of Edgar T. Wallace, millionaire mining engineer of California and co-respondent in this case.

Mrs. Stokes made a calm and collected witness, as she fought to save her reputation, assailed by the wealthy W. E. D. Stokes.

Mrs. Stokes gave her explanation of a picture shown her to identify her, portrayed herself in pajamas astride a man's neck. The man was a Mr. Meyers and not Tex Rickard, the sport promoter, as charged, the witness asserted. "The photograph was taken at a house party I attended years ago in Wyoming. I had on all my clothes underneath the pajamas. It was all just a bit of fun."

Considering Poincare's Conditions.

London, Nov. 2.—The British cabinet is considering Premier Poincare's latest qualification to his acceptance of the proposed expert commission on reparations. He is demanding that a communication be sent to Washington so framed as to restrict the inquiry to "Germany's present capacity to pay." It is recalled here that Poincare has already declared that Germany is unable to pay anything now. Last Sunday in his speech at Sampigny he said he would not agree to any discussion of the German future capacity to pay. Hence the British are asking now just what Poincare means.

High Record Held by Artis Piebe de Kol

Production of Wisconsin Cow Has Been Profitable.

An average yearly production for 15 consecutive years of 12,520 pounds of milk and 532.7 pounds of butter, or a total of 93.9 tons of milk and almost four tons of butter, is a record held by a pure bred Holstein cow, Artis Piebe de Kol, owned by the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. This production of milk is sufficient to supply one quart of milk to every family for one day in the city of Washington, D. C., or Milwaukee, Wis.

The production of this cow has also proved a profitable one. During her 15 years of milking she has returned a profit of $2.45 for every dollar's worth of feed consumed. Her net return during her lifetime thus far is $2,223.76 over cost of feed in addition to the value of her offspring.

Artis is a cow with a large frame and weighs around 1,400 pounds. Her ability to convert feed into large quantities of milk and butterfat is due to good breeding, large capacity, proper feeding and good care. She is still milking, despite her old age.

This cow, now 17 years of age, has the distinction of having had more students study and work with her than with any other animal on the university farm, according to Prof. H. S. Hulce. She is always patient and submits to handling by students as if it were a pleasure and an honor.

Destroy Red Cedars and Save Valuable Orchards

Apple rust cannot live without red cedar trees. The moral then is to cut out all red cedars within a mile of valuable orchards. The Wealthy and many of the crab apples are particularly susceptible to rust.

The disease is caused by a fungus which lives on red cedars and apple trees. In winter the fungus abides on the cedars while waiting to spread millions of spores in the spring to the apple leaves and fruit. Under the attack the upper surface of the leaves reveals small, sticky, honey-colored spores. Later, orange-colored spots, sometimes surrounded by a red margin, are produced on the lower surface. Trees badly infected become partly defoliated and have a rusty appearance. The fruit is dwarfed and misshapen. Buds which form this year are weakened and will make only a poor crop next year.

The spots on the under surface of the apple leaves are the cluster cups of the rust and the spores of the fungus produced in these cups are blown to red cedars on which they produce the so-called cedar galls or cedar apples. This is a game which only two can play—the red cedar and the apple; infection cannot be transmitted from one apple tree to another.

Several instances of losses from rust in southeastern Minnesota orchards have been reported to J. G. Leach of University farm, an authority on fruit and vegetable diseases. Doctor Leach says that in Virginia and West Virginia, where many apples are grown, the red cedar is being systematically eradicated by counties. No red cedar is left standing within a mile of an apple orchard.

Feed Fowls More Roots and Vegetables for Eggs

By feeding more roots and vegetables, the average poultry raiser can reduce his feeding expenses materially and also get more eggs. The cheapest food is that which will make hens lay, and the way to make hens lay is to keep them in good health. It is impossible to have a flock in good laying condition when only grain is given.

Such foods as carrots, turnips and potatoes are not rich in egg-producing elements, but they perform a service which renders all the other foods eaten more valuable. Let the farmer give his cows nothing but corn and his supply of milk would soon be reduced. It is the same with hens and the egg yield. From a dietary standpoint the use of roots is recommended, and they will enable one to feed more hens and get more eggs with little or no additional cost.

Permit Hens to Select Own Mash Constituents

A study of the free choice system of mash feeding for chickens made by the United States Department of Agriculture at its experiment farm located at Beltsville, Md., showed that the best results and highest egg production are obtained when hens are allowed to select their own mash constituents.

It was found that hens selected a mash composed of 66 parts cornmeal, 26 parts meat scraps, 4 parts wheat bran, and 4 parts wheat middlings. This mash gives best results with Leghorns, and a less stimulating mash, containing more bran and ground oats, with less meat scrap, has given better results with general-purpose breeds.

Shop Talk.

There was a new attendant at the spiritualistic circle, and he had formerly been employed in a big drapery shop.

The fact came to light when a client requested him to tell the medium that she wished to speak with a Mr. Green.

"Certainly, madam," said the attendant. "Can you give me his Christian name?"

"I'm afraid I've forgotten it, but he died quite a short time ago."

The attendant cleared his throat and approached the medium. "Please show the lady some of the latest shades of Greens," he said.

Gulf Stream's Course.

The force and velocity of the Gulf stream vary, to some extent, but its course does not materially change until it has run hundreds of miles northeastward off the coast of the United States. Gradually it does then shift its direction more eastward, at the same time spreading like a fan and becoming shallower.

BAKE AND CHILL WATCHES

Tests for Timepieces Made in Ovens and Refrigerators by the Manufacturers.

After the many small parts of a watch have been assembled and fitted into the case, a number of tests have to be made before the watch is ready to pass into the possession of a new owner.

One of the most necessary things to look out for is the action which changes of temperature have upon the works. Extremes of heat and cold affect the running of a watch considerably. You may, perhaps, have noticed with your own watch that it cannot be relied upon to keep accurate time if the weather makes a sudden jump from heat to cold, or vice versa.

It will either gain or lose, and you will wonder what is happening to it. When the weather becomes normal again, the watch will behave properly. Expensive watches are adjusted for temperatures varying between 35 degrees and 95 degrees.

Each watch is put in a tightly-fitting case, and placed in a chamber the temperature of which is slightly above freezing point. Its movement is observed very carefully, and adjusted from time to time, until the watch is going correctly.

The timekeeper is then moved from the cold chamber, and gradually heated in a specially constructed oven, the temperature of which is between 90 and 100 degrees. Here its internal arrangements are still carefully watched and adjusted from time to time. When the watch is going correctly in this temperature, it is returned to the cold chamber for further adjustment, if necessary. It spends about a week in each chamber.

By the time a watch has passed the temperature tests, it will go correctly in any climate. Chronometers ordered specially by explorers and travelers who are going to places where great extremes of temperature are encountered undergo very searching tests to make them thoroughly reliable.—London Tit-Bits.

PAPYRUS GROWS IN ITALY

Plants Are Greened Stems Like Reeds or Bamboo and Have Spray of Flowers at the Top.

Syracuse, in Sicily, is the one place in the world where papyrus still grows wild. Even in Egypt, home of its origin, it is extinct. And the origin of that papyrus is a charming episode in history, writes Henry James Forman.

Hiero, king of Syracuse, at about the time Theocritus was at his court composing the Idylls, built and fitted out a marvelous ship equipped with gardens, stalls for horses, and stairways and columns of Teomimian marble—a ship of 4,200 tons in those days. Archimedes doubtless helped to build it—a present to Ptolemy of Egypt.

As a part of the acknowledgment of the gift from Alexandria came the papyrus planted along the banks of the Anapo and there it has been growing ever since.

The papyrus plants are green-stemmed like reeds or bamboo, the thickness of a man's wrist, with a circular spray of flowers at the top, unique among plants.—Harper's Magazine.

Oblong Trees.

In the school of forestry, at Cambridge, there exists a wonderful specimen of an oblong tree. The trunk is about 30 by 2 inches. Its curious shape is due to no more than a little bruise or two which persuaded it to grow in one direction and not at all in any other. Other discoveries and experiments prove that an artistic bruise—it may be no more violent than strong pressure with the finger tips—can make a tree expand in a desired direction.

Slang and Idioms.

That the slang and idioms of today will be correct English tomorrow is the opinion of Professor Glickman, University of Wisconsin. "Our language is made up of what was once slang, idioms, colloquialism and jargon," he said recently.

Pertinent Query.

"Gentlemen, I can't sit still without saying a word and so I rise. I will speak what lies close to my heart. Everybody debates the future of the country. Buildings are erected for posterity. Everything that is done, built, planted, is simply for the benefit of posterity. Now, what in Heaven's name has posterity done for us?"—Kasper, Stockholm.

Sabloid Tax Talks

TAXES TO PAY DEBTS.

By PROF. H. F. WALDRADT, O. S. U.

A LARGE part of our taxes today go to pay the interest on the public debt and to provide money for its payment. The only way these debt taxes can be reduced or kept from increasing is to limit incurring debt and the issue of bonds. The present tax limitation law attempted to limit taxes without restricting expenses or debt, and it has increased the public debt from $180,000,000 in 1911 to $680,000,000 in 1922.

Prof. H. F. Waldradt.

Two years ago the legislature passed the Griswold law, which limits the debts of cities and schools, provides for serial bonds and shortens the length of time bonds can run to the life of the improvement for which they may be issued. The proposed Taft law completes a system of bond limitations by imposing a limit on county bonds, and makes it more difficult to issue bonds by requiring a 60 per cent vote of the people wherever a vote is required, as is the case in nearly all large public improvements. It also requires that the ballot carry a statement of the extra tax required to pay off the bonds, so that the voters may realize that they are not voting themselves a gift when they vote to build a building by borrowing money.

Under the Taft act the debt charges on bonds hereafter issued are not included in the tax limit. No tax limit can reduce debt charges if you have not a proper bond limitation. The only result is to decrease the amount of money available for current expenses. Under the present law, whenever a new school is built, or street improvement, there will be that much less revenue the following year for current expenses. Now it is perfectly clear that the making of public improvements does not decrease the amount of money needed for current expenses. In fact it usually costs more to run a new school building or hospital than an old one. If 14 mills is required this year for current expenses, it will be required next year.

The effect of including debt charges within the limitations under the Smith law was to reduce the current expense money to about half of what was required. The sum left for current expenses being so reduced by these debt charges, it became the practice year after year to borrow for current expenses. Finally the legislature made it possible to put the sinking fund and interest charges outside of the limit. If they had been outside in the beginning, the debt would have been less because of the realization that bond issues necessitate tax levies. The smaller debts, by reducing the amount of taxes necessary to take care of interest and other debt charges, would have kept the total tax rate lower. In all the large cities the debt charges are, for the most part, outside the limit today, so that their future exclusion does not mean, in most cases, any increase of tax unless the people increase their debt faster than the growth of the city and faster than they pay off the old debt. If they do thus increase the debt, there is no way that higher taxes can be prevented under any system.

The Taft act limits debt charges by completing the bond limitation and making bond issue difficult.

Spirit Renamed at Death.

During the life of a person in Luzon his spirit is called Tako. After the death it receives a new name. It is believed to go about in a body invisible to the eye of man, yet unchanged in appearance from the living person. If a man becomes unconscious, the natives think a vengeful spirit has lured away the soul of the sick man and they hold the ceremony of "Calling Back the Soul." Then they hold a big feast to which they invite all the spirits in order to induce them to bring back the sick man's soul.

A pronged spear is supposed to protect the people from the ever vengeful Anito, or evil spirits, who are always waiting to trip one up on the trail, to cause him to fall and hurt himself or to kill him.—Detroit News.

Six Stock Salesmen to Avoid.

The Northwestern Banker (Des Moines) puts a deal of good advice into small compass when it tells its readers that the six stock salesmen for the investor to avoid are:

The man who tells you how stockholders in similar concerns became rich over night.

The man who wants to help you in "keeping the contract away from Wall Street."

The man who talks about the "transferability" of stock.

The man who says that the stock will later be "listed on the exchange."

The man who wants you to buy because "the price is surely going up."

The man whose chief selling points are letters of recommendation from "leading citizens."

Philadelphia detectives arrested Ernest Facenda, 29, as a material witness to the death of Emma Dickson, 15-year-old Millville (N. J.) high school girl.

Parents' Caprice.
It is no wonder that during infancy and early childhood life's lessons are so difficult for the small beginner when the laws which govern them must seem to him just or unjust, consistent or inconsistent, according to the knowledge or the caprice of the adult administering them.

DUTY OF CHURCH

Dr. W. O. Thompson Says It Should Define Its Attitude.

In view of the coming conference on international relations to be held here November 8, at the M. E. church under church auspices, local interest attaches to remarks made by President W. O. Thompson of Ohio State university at a statewide meeting in Columbus, preparatory to the present series of conferences being held in 33 cities of Ohio.

Explaining what he conceives to be the duty of the church toward international relations and world peace, Dr. Thompson said:

"I suppose we are all agreed that the supreme business of the Christian church in the world is to explain the work of Christ.

"The question that faces us is what is the attitude of the church toward the world and what should be the attitude of the church toward our government in its relation to the world and the question of peace and good will among men.

"When I identified myself with the Christian church I did not surrender any of my rights as a citizen, only illuminated them with more truth than I did before that time. And so I stand here as I want to stand in the interest of the work of the Christian church and the interest of peace and good will. If the church of Christ can not make a definite stand on this question that is clear, then the church is not measuring up to her great responsibility and there is something left yet to be done.

"As chairman of the committee on International Relations of the Ohio Council of Churches, I can say these things and I urge all church people to keep their windows open toward Jerusalem."

This Curfew Has a History.

Several of the curfew bells in England are kept ringing because of some old legend or custom. That at Chertsey, in Surrey, for instance, which had been rung regularly for centuries until stopped temporarily during the great war, is the one made famous by the legend which relates how Blanche Heriot, to save the life of her lover, condemned to die at sundown, climbed the curfew tower and held the clapper of the great bell, declaring that "curfew shall not ring tonight."

HOUSE IN WHICH POET ONCE LIVED

Homes in Old New England Intimately Connected With Life of Longfellow.

Cambridge, Mass.—The three fine old New England houses which are intimately connected with the life of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow should not be forgotten at this time when Bowdoin college, his alma mater, is planning a centenary institute in 1925 to celebrate its share in making possible the work of America's most popular poet and that of his classmate, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Craigie house on Brattle street, Cambridge, the picturesque and state-ly Revolutionary mansion to which Longfellow came in 1837 as a young professor and where he lived for many years, is best known of the three. With the "House of Seven Gables" and the "Old Manse" alone it shares the honors among historic New England houses.

Two "Shrines" in Portland.

Portland, Me., claims the other two Longfellow shrines. First comes his birthplace, a square three-story house on the corner of Fore and Hancock streets. In its day it was a fine house, the home of Capt. Samuel Stephenson. In those days only the doorway, the street, and a little beach lay between it and the water. But for 50 or more years now it has fallen upon hard times. The water has receded and buildings have sprung up, hemming it in on all sides.

The poet's parents were spending the winter in this house, visiting his aunt, Mrs. Stephenson, when he was born on February 27, 1807. A little more than a year afterward they moved to the third house, which is today known as a Longfellow house. There, in the old Wadsworth home on Congress street, the poet spent his childhood and youth. Perhaps the two houses are not often confused as they were in the Monitor on September 1, when a photograph of the Congress street house was described as his birthplace. There is no question about it; the honor belongs to the less well-known house on Fore street. But the interest still centers on the Congress street house, for it is bound up with memories all have shared by reading "The Rainy Day," "My Lost Youth," and other poems.

Longfellow's Boyhood Home.

The Congress street house in Longfellow's boyhood was not in the heart of the business district as it is now but on the outskirts of the town, in the midst of the fields. From the windows of the boys' room one could look then over the cove and the farms and the woodlands toward Mt. Washington; from the eastern chambers the view was unobstructed across the bay to White Head, Fort Preble and the lighthouse on Cape Elizabeth. Happy days were spent there with music and books and brother and sister. Nearby were Deering woods, where the poet tramped and bathed and dreamed. The woods have been preserved as a city park and the house has been refurbished as nearly as possible as it was a little more than 100 years ago and is now open to the public as a museum. It is perhaps well that the three Longfellow houses should have different destinies; the birthplace, in other hands; the boyhood home, a museum; and the Cambridge house still in possession of the family.

Bermuda's Only Auto Is Destroyed by Accident

New York.—Announcement of the destruction of the only automobile in Bermuda, a horse-drawn vehicle at that, was brought to this city recently by Dr. M. F. Mabardi, surgeon on the liner Fort Victoria.

The car, owned by a hotel proprietor, came under a ban when the island passed a law barring motor vehicles. The engine was removed and used for pumping purposes and the car was converted into a carriage.

On his last trip Dr. Mabardi and a party of friends were riding in the conveyance when it toppled over on a hill leading to Hamilton pier. The horses escaped, but Dr. Mabardi suffered a sprained wrist.

Prisoners Flog Police Chief in County Jail

Marion, Ill.—Monroe Owens, chief of police of Pittsburg, near here, charged that prisoners in the county jail handcuffed him to a cell and gave him 25 lashes. Owens was arrested recently on an assault charge and placed in jail in default of bond. Nine other prisoners, two of whom had been arrested by Owens on liquor charges, held a "kangaroo court" over Owens for "breaking into jail." He was fined $10, but refused to pay. The flogging followed.

Triplets Victims of Auto Accident

Peekskill, N. Y.—Triplets were victims of an automobile accident here recently when John Morley, thirteen years old, was killed and his sisters, Mabel and Mildred, injured. The car in which they were riding, driven by William Gilbert, was overturned.

HIT BY AUTO

Child Knocked Down by Machine of Truant Officer Fausnaugh

County Truant Officer Charles Fausnaugh, while coming into the city Thursday morning on the Tarlton road in his "fifver" ran over the eight year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sayre. The little girl's forehead was bruised and her face lacerated by coming in contact with the hard surface of the road. When the machine hit her she rolled along the pike for some distance. Mr. Fausnaugh applied his emergency, stopped his car, picked up the child and took her to the office of Dr. G. W. Heffner where her wounds were given attention. Her injuries were slight. The girl had started across the road and ran directly in the path of the machine and was knocked down. The Sayre family recently moved to this county from West Virginia. The accident scared Mr. Fausnaugh badly and he was unnerved all day.

LYCEUM THEATER

In the announcement of the continuous presentation of "Able's Irish Rose" at the Lyceum theater for a third week, beginning Sunday matinee November 4, Columbus records for a consecutive run of the same play are broken. Capacity audiences is the general rule here as in all cities in which Anne Nichols' sensationally successful comedy is presented, with a heavy advance sale indicating the increasing popularity of "Able."

The splendid cast of players here, a combination of the late Pittsburgh organization and a few members of the present New York company loaned for Columbus engagement have got together in their best stride and are giving a performance of perfect team work. Already the box office ticket sellers are reporting return visits of many patrons who have seen "Able's Irish Rose" more than once. This is a usual feature in the engagements of this play, for its action is so rapid, the dialogue so scintillating and the situations so complicated, that a second or third visit is enjoyed more than the first one. Under all the surface of roaring laugh provoking scenes there are touches of pathos to relieve the strain of continuous laughter and a moral contained in its concrete illustration that a broad spirit of tolerance and love will reconcile age old antagonisms. In this play, Able, a Jewish youth, marries Rosemary Murphy, an Irish Catholic girl, and at once lets loose the warring characteristics contained in the natures of the widely differing viewpoints of their respective fathers. That Able and Rosie marry three times, the ceremonies being performed by a Methodist minister, a Rabbi and a priest, in a vain effort to please their fathers, affords a series of situations better imagined than described. This theme as is the case with the entire play is of course treated from a screamingly funny, humorous angle without offense to the most sensitive. Matinee performances are given Sunday, Wednesday and Saturday.

SMALL TOWN HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

By BUCK CAMPBELL

If some people were required to stand on their dignity they would have to lie down.

You can kill a man with kindness, but it is much easier to use the gun that is not loaded.

It is no trouble to make some folks believe the moon is made of green cheese, and how do you know that it is not?

Political patriots would be rather scarce if there were no salaries or opportunities for graft in the positions.

Did you ever see a red-headed, freckle-faced hobo? No! Red hair denotes long life, energy and a fierce disposition.

Beware of the man who wants to do something for you, two to one that he is looking for an opportunity to do something to you.

If you never say anything about a man that you would not say to his face, there would be a lot of mean things that would not be said.

Movement of Solar System.

Astronomers agree on the fact that the sun is moving through space toward a point in Lyra with a velocity of about 12 miles a second. The whole solar system is necessarily involved in this motion.

SMALL BLAZE.

The fire department was called out Thursday afternoon at 3:20 o'clock to the grocery of James Newland, corner of Mound and Mingo streets. Smoke was seen issuing from the basement. The fire was confined to a bunch of leaves and some barlap sacks in which some one had thrown either a lighted match or cigaret thru the window.

AN ABSENCE OF ANXIETY

Is What You Experience If Your Money Is Deposited With The Buckeye State Building and Loan.

There is every reason why! Behind your deposits in that institution there are first mortgage loans on Central Ohio homes, worth more than $60,000,000.

Besides that The Buckeye has a big Surplus and Reserve fund now amounting to more than $800,000.

Moreover The Buckeye has a large and contented working force properly paid and adequately officered. It is not a one man institution. These are very important points.

HEADLESS HORSEMAN RIDES

Ghost Goes Forth Nightly in Sleep
Hollow in Search of Head
Lost in Battle.

The graveyard of the old Dutch church, Tarrytown, N. Y., is described by Washington Irving at the beginning of the "Legend of Sleepy Hollow." "On the Tappan Zee there lies a small market town or rural port known by the name of Tarrytown. Not far from this village there is a little valley which is one of the quietest spots in the world. A small brook glides through it, with just murmurs enough to lull one to repose."

The enchanted region of Sleepy Hollow is haunted by the apparition of a figure on horseback, who in a mythical battle had lost his head. "Certain of the more authentic historians," continues the author, "allege that the body of the trooper having been buried in the churchyard, the ghost rides forth to the scene of battle in nightly quest of his head, and that the rushing speed with which he sometimes passes along the Hollow is owing to his being in a hurry to get back to the churchyard before day-break."

Just below the bridge flows the brook, and near the church bridge Ichabod Crane had his terrifying encounter with the headless horseman.—Detroit News.

HEAR MOANS IN MOUNTAINS

Peculiar Sounds Heard in the Chilean
Andes—Peak in England
Screams.

A deep note to be heard at certain seasons of the year proceeding from the mountain of El Bramador, in the Chilean Andes, is one of the weirdest sounds in the world. In former days the natives listened to it with superstitious fear, while even a white man, hearing it for the first time, is startled at the mountain's "powers."

Another curious mountain exists in Nevada, though this one usually gives out a note resembling at first the jingling of bells, and ending with a deep, organ-like swell.

In both cases the sounds are due to a peculiar formation of the earth, which under certain conditions of weather allows the separate particles to rub against each other and so produce uncanny effects.

In England is a mountain which howls in such a way that formerly it was supposed to be the haunt of demons. This is Cross Fell, in Westmoreland, where local conditions produce a gale with several peculiarities, including an awe-inspiring scream that at times can be heard for miles.

A Chagrined Sea Fighter.

Outside the harbor of Charlotte Amalie, on the coast of St. Thomas island, a huge rock looms out of the sea. Sail Rock it is called, and it bears a startling resemblance to a ship. As I gazed upon it, says Mr. A. Hyatt Verrill in his book "In the Wake of the Buccaneers," I could not blame the bellicose captain of a French frigate who a century and more ago sighted the rock one night and, mistaking it for a privateer, ran close and hailed it. No response came back. Again he hailed, and as still no response came he blazed a broadside at the shadowy mass. Back came the echoing thunder of the cannonade, and the rebounding shot, falling on the frigate's deck, convinced the Frenchman that the privateer was returning his fire.

For hours the battle raged; the French runners poured broadside after broadside at the massive cliff. Not until day dawned did the deluded commander of the frigate discover his mistake. Then, crestfallen and mortified, he crept away, leaving Sail Rock unscathed and triumphant.—Youth's Companion.

He Had Stolen Her Heart.

Ellen, the cook, was of a suspicious nature. She distrusted mankind in general and banks in particular; she never banked her frugal savings. Part of her wages were hoarded in a stocking in some obscure corner of her room. Ellen's "gentleman friend" was the neighboring butcher, and as the friendship had proved enduring, her mistress was not astonished when the girl announced her pending marriage.

"And I want to ask you, mum," said Ellen, "what's the best way to put my money in the bank?"

Her mistress regarded her in astonishment. "Why, Ellen, I thought you didn't believe in banks!"

"No more I do, mum," replied the girl, "but since I'm going to be married next week I kinder feel the money would be safer in the bank than in the house with a strange man about."—The Argonaut.

Fashions in Wives Vary.

Fashions in wives are not quite so capricious as fashions in clothes—they vary with decades instead of with seasons. It wasn't so long ago that the "ash-tray wife" was the most approved model of femininity. "Elizabeth" immortalizes her in "The Catvanners," we remember: "Indeed, the perfect woman does not talk at all. Who wants to hear her? All that we ask of her is that she shall listen intelligently when we wish, for a change, to tell about our own thoughts, and that she should be at hand when we want anything. Surely this is not much to ask. Matches, ash trays, and one's wife should be, so to speak, on every table; and I maintain that the perfect wife copies the conduct of the matches and the ash trays, and combines being useful with being dumb."

PERSEPHONE'S FAREWELL

The coal-black horses wait for me,
I see
The migrant birds assemble in the sky;
The autumn wind is whispering thru the tree;
And all things tell me that I must depart.

Our task is done, O Mother! See the fields
Beauteous with harvest; see the branches glow
With ripening fruitage; see the purple grapes
Heavy with nectarous juices!

We have toiled
Thru many a summer day to bring to pass
This consummation of our Springtime dreams,
We helped the plowman lay his furrow straight;
Guided the sower's hand who sowed the seed;
Brooded above the tiny infant leaves,
And helped them push their way to vigorous life.
Now comes the harvest—and our task is done.

Demeter, Mother, men forget me now;
Their hearts are jubilant with harvest time;
And I were sad but for the thought of one
Who waits my coming in the Under World;
His only spring is my return to him

With scent of apple blossoms in my hair;
His only summer is my burning lips,
Red with the touch of the life-giving sun;
And sitting at his side on that dark throne
I'll tell my memories, like carved beads,
Upon a rosary, and joy his heart
Who looks to me alone for happiness.

So farewell Mother—nay, you must not weep;
It is but for a time; when cold and gloom
And bitter winds have tried the hearts of men
Till they desire me with a strong desire,
I shall return with rapture in my breast,
And spring shall beckon to the world again.

HARTMAN THEATER

Charles "Chic" Sale, typically American as corn on the cob or rhubarb pie, as his admirers aver, is to be seen at the Hartman three days beginning Monday, November 5, in Herbert Hall Winslow's new American comedy drama, "Common Sense." Mr. Sale has been a familiar figure on Columbus stages in the past, but this is the first time he has made a visit at the head of his own company. "Common Sense" is described by its author as a humorous satire on blue laws and a timely warning against their insidious effects. Painstakingly, Winslow has gathered facts about the efforts of fanatics to curtail liberty of thought, speech and action and his completed picture is no wise overdrawn or exaggerated. With the play American thru and thru, "Chic" Sale is the artist who can act it "real American." Vaudeville has already acclaimed him as great and now he is reaping new laurels as a straight comedian. His excellent supporting company includes Betty Weston, Lillian Ross, Florence Earle, Geneva Harrison, Virginia Sale, Claude Kimball, Harry English, John Keefe, Milton Nobles Jr., Charles Honnell and others. Mail orders should be sent now. There will be a matinee Wednesday.

"Good Morning Dearie" famous musical comedy, comes to the Hartman for a three day stay beginning Thursday night, November 8. Jerome Kern, who wrote the music for "Good Morning Dearie" also wrote the music for Ziegfeld's "Sally" and Edward Royce who staged it, did a like service for "Sally" and the Ziegfeld "Follies." Anna Caldwell, who wrote the book and lyrics is well known as the author of "China Chin" and all the Fred Stone shows. She has taken a story with the thrills of melodrama and made it the basis for a comedy with music that possesses surprise, fun, excitement and novelty. The big cast includes Virginia Watson, Gwendolyn Roland, Mary Diehl, Kitty Clark, Lou Powers, Roland Hogue, Edward Allen Abbott Adams, the twelve Sunbeam girls, the sensational dancers from London and a chorus of beauties and dancing boys. There will be a matinee on Saturday. Mail orders now.

CIRCLEVILLE,

OHIO.

A STATEMENT TO THE PEOPLE OF CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO.

To begin with, I fully recognize the fact that no person can fill the office of mayor to the entire satisfaction of all, or nearly all, the people. My idea has been to do the thing that would benefit the greatest number. I have had this in my mind when signing or vetoing ordinances passed by the city council. I have always tried my utmost to be fair and impartial in all cases tried in my court and am sure I cannot be accused of favoritism in a single case.

In 22 months of my term I have assessed $8,015.71 in fines and costs in liquor cases alone. In the same number of months just prior to my administration there was $3,129.95 assessed under same charges and the improvement in this condition is plainly visible.

In filling office by appointment I have selected the best people in my judgment for the various places namely: Mr. Huston for service director; Mr. Lyle, safety director; Mr. Ruggles, Mr. Adkins and Mr. Howard for sinking fund trustees; Mr. Folsom Mrs. Henry and Miss Moody for library board; Mrs. Gussman and Mr. Colwell for board of health; Mr. Foresman for civil service board and Mr. Caldwell, president of council. All of these are competent and trustworthy persons who take an active interest in city affairs.

H. C. RENICK, Mayor.

NOW IS TIME TO HELP.

Now that the Hinde Paper Box company has selected the site for their new Container Plant there is no longer any reason for our people withholding their support from the project. Fibre containers are used here in very large quantities. The city is badly in need of steady employment for its people. Let everyone subscribe as they can afford and help get the good work started.

OLD HOMESTEAD FOR SALE.

The undersigned, as trustee and representative of the children and heirs at law of the late Christena Adkins, will offer for sale at public auction at the front door of the court house in the city of Circleville, Ohio,

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1923, at 2 o'clock P. M., the homestead of the late Christena Adkins, located in Wayne township, Pickaway County, Ohio, on the Circleville and Washington Turnpike (Improved as State Highway No. 10.) and containing 89 acres of land, more or less.

This is one of the most valuable farms in Pickaway county, rich land, thoroly tiled, silo, 2 barns, excellent farm scales under roof, chicken house, smoke and wash house and a nine room house that is practically new. This house is as near modern as a country home can be made with Delco lighting system practically new and in good condition.

The wheat is not yet sown but expect to sow it. If sown, the heirs will turn over to the purchaser one-half of the wheat sown on said lands. If purchaser desires to buy the tenant's one-half he has the privilege of doing so by paying for sowing the same. The heirs will pay the December, 1923 tax but all taxes thereafter shall be paid by the purchaser. Possession will be given to do anything on the premises that will not interfere with rights of tenant now in possession and full possession will be given March 1, 1924.

The purchaser or purchasers will be required to pay one thousand dollars on day of sale as good faith money, and the balance of purchase price within thirty days from day of sale in cash. A contract of sale will be entered into with purchaser on day of sale and when terms of sale are complied with a warranty deed for the premises, free and clear from all incumbrances will be handed purchaser, except the June tax, 1924.

If you desire an ideal home on an ideal road and very near good markets you will be interested in this sale. Come and look at it. This is a forced sale to distribute the estate of the deceased.

A Room Filled With Books.

Books are delightful society. If you go into a room filled with books—even without taking them down from their shelves, they seem to speak to you, seem to welcome you, seem to tell you that they have something inside their covers that will be good for you, and that they are willing and desirous to impart to you. Value them, and endeavor to turn them to account.—W. E. Gladstone.

Folly Came Home to Him.

When Charles V abdicated his throne and retired to the monastery of St. Juste, he amused himself by trying to learn watchmaking. After some time he remarked one day: "What an egregious fool must I have been to have squandered so much blood and treasure in an absurd attempt to make men think alike, when I cannot even make a few watches keep time together."

Jabloid Tax Talks

INCREASE OF TAXES.

By JOHN B. DEMPSEY, Cleveland.

UNDER the existing law the average rate in Ohio has increased from 10 1/2 mills in 1911 to more than 21 1/2 mills in 1922. The increase in three years from 1919 to 1922 averaged more than 2 mills a year.

It is proposed in the Taft law that we impose a 14 mill limit outside of municipalities and a 17 mill limit within municipalities. Taken together with a repeal of state levy, this is a net increase in the rural districts of about 2 mills, and a possible increase in the cities of about 1 mill over the 15 mill limit. As a matter of fact, however, there is no 15 mill limit in the Smith law today. There are at least four exceptions to this limit which may be made without vote of the people, one of which, for public libraries, amounts to 1 1/2 mills, so that at least 16 1/2 mills may be levied today, in addition to levies for forests and some other luxuries.

Debt charges on bonds issued after this time are excluded by the Taft law from the current expense limit, while those which are now within the so-called 15 mill limit remain within the new limit. Under the old law new debt charges were first included within the limit, but after this policy had reduced the amount of money available for current expenses for several years and resulted in great sums being borrowed to pay current deficits, the debt charges were, in most cases, excluded in 1920, and are excluded today. If they had been excluded from the beginning, we would have less debt and less taxes at the present time. The exclusion of future sinking fund and interest levies will not materially affect our rate in the cities because most of such charges are excluded already.

Taking the Taft act as a whole, it can be said that there will be no average increase of taxes throughout the state, even though the budget commission allows the limit, except where debt is increased by the building of public improvements faster than the old debt is being paid off. In a broader sense this law means an ultimate decrease in taxes. It establishes a pay-as-you-go policy. It will check the rapid increase in public debt which resulted from the Smith law. The whole story of the new law is to limit expense. That means the taxes will look after themselves. A limit which is so strict that a sincere public official can not possibly keep his budget within the limit defeats its own purpose, runs the cities and schools into debt and results ultimately in higher taxes.

Today a large part of our tax is devoted to paying debts which should have been paid from current revenue many years ago. Under this law the budget commission is authorized to consider all the income and fix the total amount which may be spent by each subdivision instead of merely fixing the taxes.

Jabloid Tax Talks

LIMITATION OF EXPENDITURES.

By JOHN M. VORYS, Columbus.

NO ONE denies that the present tax limitation laws in Ohio are so confused that they can not be understood, so arbitrary that they can not be varied to meet local conditions in any county, and so ineffective that they have not limited either taxes or debts. As long ago as June, 1922, a committee was appointed by the Ohio Tax association, a nonpartisan group interested solely in the study of taxation problems, to revise the tax limitation and distribution laws. The committee had representatives of taxpayers, city and county officials, urban and rural schools and other groups interested in the subject, and had every expert assistance. The bill prepared by this committee was introduced in the Ohio legislature in January, 1923, by Robert A. Taft. In accordance with suggestions made, 30 amendments were adopted. The bill was passed by the legislature by more than a three-fifths vote, and re-passed over the veto of Governor Donahey.

More study was devoted to this subject than to any other by the legislature, and it was passed only because the members were satisfied that it represented a substantial improvement on the existing law and was based on sound principles of taxation.

In short, the Taft tax law is a sincere effort to provide a permanent system of tax limitation, based on sound principles and supported by those men who have given the subject a close and careful study.

FRENCH STAND MAY KILL PARLEY

Administration Against an Abortive Inquiry.

REPORTS DISTURB OFFICIALS

Announced at White House That the United States Will Refuse to Participate in Proposed Reparations Conference Unless It Is Permitted to Inquire Into Germany's Capacity to Pay.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The United States will refuse to participate in the proposed reparations conference unless it is permitted to inquire into Germany's capacity to pay.

This statement was made by an authorized spokesman for the government, who added: "It never has been our intention that the delegates to the conference should conduct an abortive and limited inquiry."

Premier Poincare then, if press reports from Paris are verified, seemingly succeeded in imposing a condition to which this government will not give its assent, when he said: "Let it (the reparations conference) not attempt either to change decisions already taken regarding the total amount of our credits, or engage in future attempts indefinitely."

The spokesman declared that all previous official utterances of the French premier could be squared with the terms upon which it is proposed to hold the conference. It was asserted if the government is notified officially that the conference must not investigate Germany's reparation-paying ability, it will not be worth while to agree to American participation.

The state department is without word from France that Poincare has refused any reparations inquiry, but officials obviously were disturbed by the cable dispatches coming through unofficial channels.

Officials now admit that it looks very much as though Poincare is following deliberately the policy of piling condition on condition until Great Britain and the United States give up all hope of reducing Germany's war bill through international agreement.

Poincare's present tactics, it is claimed, go much further than was intended by those who drafted the Versailles treaty. Paragraph 13 of Annex 11, Chapter 8, of that treaty, it was stated, specifies that the reparations total fixed should not be changed except by unanimous consent of all nations concerned.

The American and British governments, the spokesman explained, have accepted the principle that the reparations sum due France, Belgium and Italy can not be reduced without their consent. In order to present a proposal for their consideration and possible approval, it is first necessary to formulate it and to do that an inquiry must be held.

The state department now has before it for consideration several more or less formal communications from foreign governments. The nature of the communications was not disclosed by officials, but apparently they are of a nature that precludes hope of holding the conference.

HAS TALK WITH FORD

Inventor Sperry Would Fill the Air With Flying Flivvers.

New York, Nov. 2.—Lawrence B. Sperry, who invented the world's smallest flying machine, which weighs less than a ton and goes 100 miles an hour and a half gallons of gasoline, believes his infant flyer will replace the land hugging Lizzie and can be parked in the kitchen if necessary. He has discussed the manufacture of the plane with Henry Ford who showed enough interest to predict the motor can be built for $50. However, Ford has not intimated his intention of peppering the sky with these three cylinder air-cooler Sperry machines. "If Ford's figures are true we can put this machine on the market for less than $1,000," Sperry said.

The little plane rides the air bumps at less than fifteen horsepower and does 100 miles an hour with ease. As it soars and glides like a bird, Sperry smokes his pipe or reads his favorite magazine.

RADIO TESTS MADE KNOWN

Power Generated in New York Transmitted to Warsaw.

New York, Nov. 2.—New and startling inventions in wireless telegraphy by which scientists hope to produce radio power that will run all the engines of the earth became known through the Radio Corporation of America. Power generated in New York has been transmitted at the rate of 136,000 miles a second to Warsaw—and this same power operated a wireless transmitting set in the Polish metropolis. Even more astounding is the fact that this power was automatically relayed back to New York, without human intervention. It is 4,200 miles from this city to Warsaw.

Further tests, under the supervision of Dr. E. F. Alexanderson of Schenectady, chief engineer of the Radio Corporation, show that radio signals generated here were made to "loop-the-loop" from New York to Warsaw and return, forty times. The electrostatic waves, therefore, traveled 368,000 miles, with theoretical stops at each end of the line, before their energy was lost in the ether.

WOMAN TESTIFIES AT BLACKMAIL TRIAL

Alleged Remarks of Corcoran Quoted by Witness.

Boston, Nov. 2.—Mrs. Mary Louise Lyons, former stenographer for William J. Corcoran, ex-district attorney of Middlesex county, testified at the alleged blackmail ring trial that she overheard her employer tell other defendants in the case that some one had been given a bad scare on the night before and that they were going to "shake down" some one for a large sum of money.

The alleged remarks of Corcoran were made in the office of the General Drug company, of which the former prosecutor was an official in 1919. Mrs. Lyons said that the men addressed by Corcoran were J. Warren Kane, Michael J. Lyons and Attorney Harry E. Levenson. Other persons charged with complicity in extorting thousands of dollars from wealthy men in Boston by the alleged blackmail ring were frequent visitors at the office, she declared.

Attorney John F. McDonald, counsel for John L. Donovan, the Boston leather merchant, who was "shaken down" for $17,500 by the alleged members of the ring, testified that he protested to District Attorney Pelletier, who was later expelled from office for malfeasance in office, that the trapping of his client in the apartment of Theresa Duggan, the alleged lure of the "ring," was blackmail. Pelletier merely promised to "take care of the case when it came up," McDonald said. The case was the threatened application for a warrant charging Donovan, a married man, with a statutory offense by Attorney Levenson.

MAY DISCONTINUE COMMUNICATION

Stresemann to Move Against Rebellious Bavaria.

MILITARY SITUATION TENSE

Private Armies in Bavaria of Hitler, Erhardt and Rossbach Reported Concentrating on the Thuringia Border—Rival National Government to Berlin May Be Proclaimed, Socialists' Ultimatum Considered.

Berlin, Nov. 2.—Having put down the Saxon "reds," Dictator Stresemann, it is now declared, is considering measures against rebellious Bavaria.

The first measure contemplated is the shutting off of salaries of all government employees in Bavaria and shutting down on money to the Bavaria banks. Should that not suffice to bring Bavaria to its senses, the posts and telegraphs to Bavaria will be discontinued, and as a last resort the railways.

The reichswehr ministry says that the orders to the national army are to fight if the Bavarians cross the line. It is generally recognized that that would be the signal for the beginning of civil war.

For several days sensational rumors have been reaching Berlin that something like mobilization is going on in Bavaria of Hitler's, Erhardt's, Rossbach's and other feudal like private armies, and that they are concentrating on the Thuringia border. Reports created the fear that the irregular Bavarian organizations, including the "fighting leagues," might be tempted to cross into Thuringia. Two regiments of infantry, with some artillery and machine guns, are reported near the line.

Rumors are also flying thick that Dictator Von Kahr, Adolph Hitler and General Ludendorff are contemplating proclaiming a rival national government to Berlin, imitating the Turks by creating a German "Angora."

Dictator Stresemann is confined to his bed by some difficulty with his heart, due to the strain of recent days. If the Socialists withdraw from the cabinet, it is said that Stresemann is working out a plan for the creation of a directorate of three members. The cabinet decided to postpone its decision on acceptance or rejection of the conditions named by the Socialists under which they will remain in the cabinet.

Fearing that concentration of Bavarian irregular military organizations of the numerous "private armies" on the northern border of Bavaria presages a Bavarian invasion of "red" Thuringia, General Von Seeck telegraphed orders to General Mueler, commanding some 50,000 of the reichswehr in Saxony, to prepare to send troops to the Thuringia-Bavarian frontier.

COCHRAN VANQUISHED

Defeated by Hagenlacher, German Champion, in Billiard Tourney.

New York, Nov. 2.—An upset occurred in the world's 18.2 bakline billiards tourney when Erich Hagenlacher, the German champion, beat Welker Cochran, the California star, who vanquished Willie Hoppe, Hagenlacher, who defeated Roger Conti, the French champion, Wednesday, came through to victory by the margin of 500 to 323 points over Cochran.

Willie Hoppe, world's billiard champion, defeated Edouard Horemans, the champion of Belgium. After the Belgian had scored a record run of 241, making the count 415 to 323, Hoppe came from behind and won, 500 to 435.

Young Jake Schaefer, favored by many to win, scored his second victory in two matches by defeating Roger Conti, champion of France, 500 to 343. It was the third loss for Conti in as many engagements, and as good as eliminated him in the titular hunt.

Long Chase Ends In Court.

Columbus, Nov. 2.—A chase of 2,000 miles across the country came to an end in federal court here when Clarence J. Smithling, about 28, said to be from Syracuse, N. Y., was sent to the Franklin county jail in default of $3,000 bond, after being arrested on a warrant sworn out by Howard H. Corbin, Syracuse, charging white slavery. Fokes, Syracuse, a brother of Mrs. Corbin, followed them.

CLERK PASSED ON MERIT OF CLAIM

Payment of Fee to Architect O'Brien Probed at Inquiry.

HINES HAD DISAPPROVED IT

President Coolidge Declined to Arbitrate the Controversy Between O'Brien and the Veterans' Bureau Over Validity of Claim—Mysterious Pencil Memorandum Found That Remains Unexplained.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The veterans' bureau investigation revealed these facts in connection with the payment of the $33,000 claim of Matthew O'Brien, San Francisco architect:

The claim was allowed and payment made by the general accounting office on an ex-parte showing of attorneys for the claimant. No effort was made to ascertain the facts on which Director Frank T. Hines of the veterans' bureau acted when he disapproved the claim and so notified the general accounting office.

President Coolidge, within 30 days, declined to arbitrate the controversy between O'Brien and the veterans' bureau on the validity of the claim, advising that it should take its course through the general accounting office and the court of claims, since Director Hines had disapproved it.

The supposed merits of the claim were passed on by a 23-year-old clerk in the general accounting office. The findings of this clerk were approved and the payment was made on the authority of a law clerk without reference to any higher authority in the general accounting office.

A mysterious pencil memorandum found in the file on this claim remains unexplained. This memorandum was a calculation of 40 per cent of $3,300, the results being $1,320. Chairman Reed of the investigating committee said of this: "The amount of this claim was $33,000. Ten per cent of that is $3,300. Somebody has been figuring on what is 40 per cent of this amount."

Through John B. Milliken, formerly attached to the veterans' bureau as assistant to the director, testimony of Hans M. Moore, concerning Colonel Charles R. Forbes' trip to the Pacific coast in the summer of 1922 was in part substantiated.

SLAYER EXECUTED

Convicted of the Murder of a Schoolboy Near Dayton.

Columbus, Nov. 2.—Irvin Laver of Montgomery county, convicted of the murder of Arthur Moore, a 14-year-old schoolboy of Dayton, in 1922, paid the supreme penalty for his crime by electrocution at the Ohio state penitentiary at an early hour today. Laver was known as the "rabbit man" around Dayton, as it was on the pretext of giving the Moore boy a rabbit that he was lured into the woods near Dayton, where the murder was committed. Two staves of execution of sentence were granted Laver before final decision in the case was rendered by the supreme court a few days ago, the court setting the date of his electrocution for Nov. 2.

Arbuckle Sued For Divorce.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 2.—Rosege "Fatty" Arbuckle, once famous in the movie world, and recently a monologist of "three-a-day" vaudeville circuit, has been sued for divorce here by Mrs. Minta E. (Duffee) Arbuckle, on grounds of desertion and neglect to provide. In asking for a severance of the matrimonial bonds Mrs. Arbuckle declared that for many years she has not lived with her husband. She alleges the former film comedian deserted her in September, 1917.

DERIES ALL CHARGES

Mrs. Stokes on the Witness Stand in the Divorce Suit.

New York, Nov. 2.—Helen Ellwood Stokes denied on the stand all evidence offered by her husband in his divorce suit tending to show that she was not fit to care for her two children.

"I was never in Mr. Wallace's apartment in my life," she declared, speaking of the New York home of Edgar T. Wallace, millionaire mining engineer of California and co-respondent in this case.

Mrs. Stokes made a calm and collected witness, as she fought to save her reputation, assailed by the wealthy W. E. D. Stokes.

Mrs. Stokes gave her explanation of a picture shown her to identify, it portrayed herself in pajamas astride a man's neck. The man was a Mr. Meyers and not Tex Rickard, the sport promoter, as charged, the witness asserted. "The photograph was taken at a house party I attended years ago in Wyoming. I had on all my clothes underneath the pajamas. It was all just a bit of fun."

Considering Poincare's Conditions.

London, Nov. 2.—The British cabinet is considering Premier Poincare's latest qualification to his acceptance of the proposed expert commission on reparations. He is demanding that a communication be sent to Washington so framed as to restrict the inquiry to "Germany's present capacity to pay." It is recalled here that Poincare has already declared that Germany is unable to pay anything now. Last Sunday in his speech at Sampligny he said he would not agree to any discussion of the German future capacity to pay. Hence the British are asking now just what Poincare means.

Fox Hunters to Meet.

Washington, C. H., O., Nov. 2.—The thirteenth annual national fox hunters' field trials will begin near this city at dawn Nov. 8. About 100 dogs will be released on this occasion.

MARKET REVIEW

Columbus, Nov. 2.—The Ohio division of markets issued the following marketgram:

Corn declined sharply during the week, but was firmer at the close, when movement became lighter. Quoted Nov. 1: No. 2 hard winter wheat at Chicago $1.08 1/4; No. 2 red winter wheat, St. Louis, $1.11 to $1.15; No. 1 dark northern spring, Minneapolis, $1.15 to $1.28; No. 2 yellow corn, Chicago, 84c to 85c; St. Louis 85c to 86c; new corn, St. Louis, 79c to 80c; No. 3 white oats, Chicago, 42c to 43c.

FEED—Markets dull and irregular. Western situation fairly steady, but eastern markets are very weak, especially for wheat feeds. Considerable transit and junction feed offered, which, because of difficulty to move it, is quoted at $1.15 to $1.50 under shipping market prices.

High Record Held by Artis Piebe de Kol

Production of Wisconsin Cow Has Been Profitable.

An average yearly production for 15 consecutive years of 12,520 pounds of milk and 532.7 pounds of butter, or a total of 33.9 tons of milk and almost four tons of butter, is a record held by a pure bred Holstein cow, Artis Piebe de Kol, owned by the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. This production of milk is sufficient to supply one quart of milk to every family for one day in the city of Washington, D. C., or Milwaukee, Wis.

The production of this cow has also proved a profitable one. During her 15 years of milking she has returned a profit of $2.45 for every dollar's worth of feed consumed. Her net return during her lifetime thus far is $2,228.76 over cost of feed in addition to the value of her offspring.

Artis is a cow with a large frame and weighs around 1,400 pounds. Her ability to convert feed into large quantities of milk and butterfat is due to good breeding, large capacity, proper feeding and good care. She is still milking, despite her old age.

This cow, now 17 years of age, has the distinction of having had more students study and work with her than with any other animal on the university farm, according to Prof. H. S. Hulce. She is always patient and submits to handling by students as if it were a pleasure and an honor.

Destroy Red Cedars and Save Valuable Orchards

Apple rust cannot live without red cedar trees. The moral then is to cut out all red cedars within a mile of valuable orchards. The Wealthy and many of the crab apples are particularly susceptible to rust.

The disease is caused by a fungus which lives on red cedars and apple trees. In winter the fungus abides on the cedars while waiting to spread millions of spores in the spring to the apple leaves and fruit. Under the attack the upper surface of the leaves reveals small, sticky, honey-colored spores. Later, orange-colored spots, sometimes surrounded by a red margin, are produced on the lower surface. Trees badly infected become partly defoliated and have a rusty appearance. The fruit is dwarfed and misshapen. Buds which form this year are weakened and will make only a poor crop next year.

The spots on the under surface of the apple leaves are the cluster cups of the rust and the spores of the fungus produced in these cups are blown to red cedars on which they produce the so-called cedar galls or cedar apples. This is a game which only two can play—the red cedar and the apple; infection cannot be transmitted from one apple tree to another.

Several instances of losses from rust in southeastern Minnesota orchards have been reported to J. G. Leach of University farm, an authority on fruit and vegetable diseases. Doctor Leach says that in Virginia and West Virginia, where many apples are grown, the red cedar is being systematically eradicated by counties. No red cedar is left standing within a mile of an apple orchard.

Feed Fowls More Roots and Vegetables for Eggs

By feeding more roots and vegetables, the average poultry raiser can reduce his feeding expenses materially and also get more eggs. The cheapest food is that which will make hens lay, and the way to make hens lay is to keep them in good health. It is impossible to have a flock in good laying condition when only grain is given.

Such foods as carrots, turnips and potatoes are not rich in egg-producing elements, but they perform a service which renders all the other foods eaten more valuable. Let the farmer give his cows nothing but corn and his supply of milk would soon be reduced. It is the same with hens and the egg yield. From a dietary standpoint the use of roots is recommended, and they will enable one to feed more hens and get more eggs with little or no additional cost.

Permit Hens to Select Own Mash Constituents

A study of the free choice system of mash feeding for chickens made by the United States Department of Agriculture at its experiment farm located at Beltsville, Md., showed that the best results and highest egg production are obtained when hens are allowed to select their own mash constituents.

It was found that hens selected a mash composed of 66 parts cornmeal, 26 parts meat scraps, 4 parts wheat bran, and 4 parts wheat middlings. This mash gives best results with Leghorns, and a less stimulating mash, containing more bran and ground oats, with less meat scrap, has given better results with general-purpose breeds.

Shop Talk.

There was a new attendant at the spiritualistic circle, and he had formerly been employed in a big drapery shop.

The fact came to light when a client requested him to tell the medium that she wished to speak with a Mr. Green.

"Certainly, madam," said the attendant. "Can you give me his Christian name?"

"I'm afraid I've forgotten it, but he died quite a short time ago."

The attendant cleared his throat and approached the medium. "Please show the lady some of the latest shades of Greens," he said.

Gulf Stream's Course.

The force and velocity of the Gulf stream vary, to some extent, but its course does not materially change until it has run hundreds of miles northeastward off the coast of the United States. Gradually it does then shift its direction more eastward, at the same time spreading like a fan and becoming shallower.

BAKE AND CHILL WATCHES

Tests for Timepieces Made in Ovens and Refrigerators by the Manufacturers.

After the many small parts of a watch have been assembled and fitted into the case, a number of tests have to be made before the watch is ready to pass into the possession of a new owner.

One of the most necessary things to look out for is the action which changes of temperature have upon the works. Extremes of heat and cold affect the running of a watch considerably. You may, perhaps, have noticed with your own watch that it cannot be relied upon to keep accurate time if the weather makes a sudden jump from heat to cold, or vice versa.

It will either gain or lose, and you will wonder what is happening to it. When the weather becomes normal again, the watch will behave properly. Expensive watches are adjusted for temperatures varying between 35 degrees and 95 degrees.

Each watch is put in a tightly-fitting case, and placed in a chamber the temperature of which is slightly above freezing point. Its movement is observed very carefully, and adjusted from time to time, until the watch is going correctly.

The timekeeper is then moved from the cold chamber, and gradually heated in a specially constructed oven, the temperature of which is between 90 and 100 degrees. Here its internal arrangements are still carefully watched and adjusted from time to time. When the watch is going correctly in this temperature, it is returned to the cold chamber for further adjustment, if necessary. It spends about a week in each chamber.

By the time a watch has passed the temperature tests, it will go correctly in any climate. Chronometers ordered specially by explorers and travelers who are going to places where great extremes of temperature are encountered undergo very searching tests to make them thoroughly reliable.—London Tit-Bits.

PAPYRUS GROWS IN ITALY

Plants Are Greened Stems Like Reeds or Bamboo and Have Spray of Flowers at the Top.

Syracuse, in Sicily, is the one place in the world where papyrus still grows wild. Even in Egypt, home of its origin, it is extinct. And the origin of that papyrus is a charming episode in history, writes Henry James Forman.

Hiero, king of Syracuse, at about the time Theocritus was at his court composing the Idyls, built and fitted out a marvelous ship equipped with gardens, stalls for horses, and stairways and columns of Teomimian marble—a ship of 4,200 tons in those days. Archimedes doubtless helped to build it—a present to Ptolemy of Egypt.

As a part of the acknowledgment of the gift from Alexandria came the papyrus planted along the banks of the Anapo and there it has been growing ever since.

The papyrus plants are green-stemmed like reeds or bamboo, the thickness of a man's wrist, with a circular spray of flowers at the top, unique among plants.—Harper's Magazine.

Oblong Trees.

In the school of forestry, at Cambridge, there exists a wonderful specimen of an oblong tree. The trunk is about 30 by 2 inches. Its curious shape is due to no more than a little bruise or two which persuaded it to grow in one direction and not at all in any other. Other discoveries and experiments prove that an artistic bruise—it may be no more violent than strong pressure with the finger tips—can make a tree expand in a desired direction.

Slang and Idioms.

That the slang and idioms of today will be correct English tomorrow is the opinion of Professor Glicksman, University of Wisconsin. "Our language is made up of what was once slang, idioms, colloquialism and jargon," he said recently.

Pertinent Query.

"Gentlemen, I can't sit still without saying a word and so I rise. I will speak what lies close to my heart. Everybody debates the future of the country. Buildings are erected for posterity. Everything that is done, built, planted, is simply for the benefit of posterity. Now, what in Heaven's name has posterity done for us?"—Kasper, Stockholm.

Tabloid Tax Talks

TAXES TO PAY DEBTS.

By PROF. H. F. WALRADT, O. S. U.

A LARGE part of our taxes today go to pay the interest on the public debt and to provide money for its payment. The only way these debt taxes can be reduced or kept from increasing is to limit incurring debt and the issue of bonds. The present tax limitation law attempted to limit taxes without restricting expenses or debt, and it has increased the public debt from $180,000,000 in 1911 to $680,000,000 in 1922.

Two years ago the legislature passed the Griswold law, which limits the debts of cities and schools, provides for serial bonds and shortens the length of time bonds can run to the life of the improvement for which they may be issued. The proposed Taft law completes a system of bond limitations by imposing a limit on county bonds, and makes it more difficult to issue bonds by requiring a 60 per cent vote of the people wherever a vote is required, as is the case in nearly all large public improvements. It also requires that the ballot carry a statement of the extra tax required to pay off the bonds, so that the voters may realize that they are not voting themselves a gift when they vote to build a building by borrowing money.

Under the Taft act the debt charges on bonds hereafter issued are not included in the tax limit. No tax limit can reduce debt charges if you have not a proper bond limitation. The only result is to decrease the amount of money available for current expenses. Under the present law, whenever a new school is built, or street improvement, there will be that much less revenue the following year for current expenses. Now it is perfectly clear that the making of public improvements does not decrease the amount of money needed for current expenses. In fact it usually costs more to run a new school building or hospital than an old one. If 14 mills is required this year for current expenses, it will be required next year.

The effect of including debt charges within the limitations under the Smith law was to reduce the current expense money to about half of what was required. The sum left for current expenses being so reduced by these debt charges, it became the practice year after year to borrow for current expenses. Finally the legislature made it possible to put the sinking fund and interest charges outside of the limit. If they had been outside in the beginning, the debt would have been less because of the realization that bond issues necessitate tax levies. The smaller debts, by reducing the amount of taxes necessary to take care of interest and other debt charges, would have kept the total tax rate lower. In all the large cities the debt charges are, for the most part, outside the limit today, so that their future exclusion does not mean, in most cases, any increase of tax unless the people increase their debt faster than the growth of the city and faster than they pay off the old debt. If they do thus increase the debt, there is no way that higher taxes can be prevented under any system.

The Taft act limits debt charges by completing the bond limitation and making bond issue difficult.

Spirit Renamed at Death.

During the life of a person in Luzon his spirit is called Tako. After the death it receives a new name. It is believed to go about in a body invisible to the eye of man, yet unchanged in appearance from the living person. If a man becomes unconscious, the natives think a vengeful spirit has lured away the soul of the sick man and they hold the ceremony of "Calling Back the Soul." Then they hold a big feast to which they invite all the spirits in order to induce them to bring back the sick man's soul.

A pronged spear is supposed to protect the people from the ever vengeful Anito, or evil spirits, who are always waiting to trip one up on the trail, to cause him to fall and hurt himself or to kill him.—Detroit News.

Six Stock Salesmen to Avoid.

The Northwestern Banker (Des Moines) puts a deal of good advice into small compass when it tells its readers that the six stock salesmen for the investor to avoid are:

The man who tells you how stockholders in similar concerns became rich over night.

The man who wants to help you in "keeping the contract away from Wall Street."

The man who talks about the "transferability" of stock.

The man who says that the stock will later be "listed on the exchange."

The man who wants you to buy because "the price is surely going up."

The man whose chief selling points are letters of recommendation from "leading citizens."

Philadelphia detectives arrested Ernest Facenda, 20, as a material witness to the death of Emma Dickson, 15-year-old Millville (N. J.) high school girl.

Parents' Caprice.
It is no wonder that during infancy and early childhood life's lessons are so difficult for the small beginner when the laws which govern them must seem to him just or unjust, consistent or inconsistent, according to the knowledge or the caprice of the adult administering them.

DUTY OF CHURCH

Dr. W. O. Thompson Says It Should Define Its Attitude.

In view of the coming conference on international relations to be held here November 8, at the M. E. church under church auspices, local interest attaches to remarks made by President W. O. Thompson of Ohio State university at a statewide meeting in Columbus, preparatory to the present series of conferences being held in 33 cities of Ohio.

Explaining what he conceives to be the duty of the church toward international relations and world peace, Dr. Thompson said:

"I suppose we are all agreed that the supreme business of the Christian church in the world is to explain the work of Christ.

"The question that faces us is what is the attitude of the church toward the world and what should be the attitude of the church toward our government in its relation to the world and the question of peace and good will among men.

"When I identified myself with the Christian church I did not surrender any of my rights as a citizen, only illuminated them with more truth than I did before that time. And so I stand here as I want to stand in the interest of the work of the Christian church and the interest of peace and good will. If the church of Christ can not make a definite stand on this question that is clear, then the church is not measuring up to her great responsibility and there is something left yet to be done.

"As chairman of the committee on International Relations of the Ohio Council of Churches, I can say these things and I urge all church people to keep their windows open toward Jerusalem."

This Curfew Has a History.

Several of the curfew bells in England are kept ringing because of some old legend or custom. That at Chertsey, in Surrey, for instance, which had been rung regularly for centuries until stopped temporarily during the great war, is the one made famous by the legend which relates how Blanche Heriot, to save the life of her lover, condemned to die at sundown, climbed the curfew tower and held the clapper of the great bell, declaring that "curfew shall not ring tonight."

HOUSE IN WHICH
POET ONCE LIVED

Homes in Old New England Intimately Connected With Life of Longfellow.

Cambridge, Mass.—The three fine old New England houses which are intimately connected with the life of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow should not be forgotten at this time when Bowdoin college, his alma mater, is planning a centenary institute in 1925 to celebrate its share in making possible the work of America's most popular poet and that of his classmate, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Craigie house on Brattle street, Cambridge, the picturesque and stately Revolutionary mansion to which Longfellow came in 1837 as a young professor and where he lived for many years, is best known of the three. With the "House of Seven Gables" and the "Old Manse" alone it shares the honors among historic New England houses.

Two "Shrines" in Portland.

Portland, Me., claims the other two Longfellow shrines. First comes his birthplace, a square three-story house on the corner of Fore and Hancock streets. In its day it was a fine house, the home of Capt. Samuel Stephenson. In those days only the doorway, the street, and a little beach lay between it and the water. But for 50 or more years now it has fallen upon hard times. The water has receded and buildings have sprung up, hemming it in on all sides.

The poet's parents were spending the winter in this house, visiting his aunt, Mrs. Stephenson, when he was born on February 27, 1807. A little more than a year afterward they moved to the third house, which is today known as a Longfellow house. There, in the old Wadsworth home on Congress street, the poet spent his childhood and youth. Perhaps the two houses are not often confused as they were in the Monitor on September 1, when a photograph of the Congress street house was described as his birthplace. There is no question about it; the honor belongs to the less well-known house on Fore street. But the interest still centers on the Congress street house, for it is bound up with memories all have shared by reading "The Rainy Day," "My Lost Youth," and other poems.

Longfellow's Boyhood Home.

The Congress street house in Longfellow's boyhood was not in the heart of the business district as it is now but on the outskirts of the town, in the midst of the fields. From the windows of the boys' room one could look then over the cove and the farms and the woodlands toward Mt. Washington; from the eastern chambers the view was unobstructed across the bay to White Head, Fort Preble and the lighthouse on Cape Elizabeth. Happy days were spent there with music and books and brother and sister. Nearby were Deering woods, where the poet tramped and bathed and dreamed. The woods have been preserved as a city park and the house has been refurbished as nearly as possible as it was a little more than 100 years ago and is now open to the public as a museum. It is perhaps well that the three Longfellow houses should have different destinies; the birthplace, in other hands; the boyhood home, a museum; and the Cambridge house still in possession of the family.

Bermuda's Only Auto Is Destroyed by Accident

New York.—Announcement of the destruction of the only automobile in Bermuda, a horse-drawn vehicle at that, was brought to this city recently by Dr. M. F. Mabardi, surgeon on the liner Fort Victoria.

The car, owned by a hotel proprietor, came under a ban when the island passed a law barring motor vehicles. The engine was removed and used for pumping purposes and the car was converted into a carriage.

On his last trip Dr. Mabardi and a party of friends were riding in the conveyance when it toppled over on a hill leading to Hamilton pier. The horses escaped, but Dr. Mabardi suffered a sprained wrist.

Prisoners Flog Police
Chief in County Jail

Marion, Ill.—Monroe Owens, chief of police of Pittsburg, near here, charged that prisoners in the county jail handcuffed him to a cell and gave him 25 lashes. Owens was arrested recently on an assault charge and placed in jail in default of bond. Nine other prisoners, two of whom had been arrested by Owens on liquor charges, held a "kangaroo court" over Owens for "breaking into jail." He was fined $10, but refused to pay. The flogging followed.

Triplets Victims of Auto Accident

Peekskill, N. Y.—Triplets were victims of an automobile accident here recently when John Morley, thirteen years old, was killed and his sisters, Mabel and Mildred, injured. The car in which they were riding, driven by William Gilbert, was overturned.

HIT BY AUTO

Child Knocked Down by Machine of Truant Officer Fausnaugh

County Truant Officer Charles Fausnaugh, while coming into the city Thursday morning on the Tarlton road in his "flivver" ran over the eight year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sayre. The little girl's forehead was bruised and her face lacerated by coming in contact with the hard surface of the road. When the machine hit her she rolled along the pike for some distance. Mr. Fausnaugh applied his emergency, stopped his car, picked up the child and took her to the office of Dr. G. W. Heffner where her wounds were given attention. Her injuries were slight. The girl had started across the road and ran directly in the path of the machine and was knocked down. The Sayre family recently moved to this county from West Virginia. The accident scared Mr. Fausnaugh badly and he was unnerved all day.

LYCEUM THEATER

In the announcement of the continuous presentation of "Abie's Irish Rose" at the Lyceum theater for a third week, beginning Sunday matinee November 4, Columbus records for a consecutive run of the same play are broken. Capacity audiences is the general rule here as in all cities in which Anne Nichols' sensational successful comedy is presented, with a heavy advance sale indicating the increasing popularity of "Abie."

The splendid cast of players here, a combination of the late Pittsburgh organization and a few members of the present New York company loaned for Columbus engagement have got together in their best stride and are giving a performance of perfect team work. Already the box office ticket sellers are reporting return visits of many patrons who have seen "Abie's Irish Rose" more than once. This is a usual feature in the engagements of this play, for its action is so rapid, the dialogue so scintillating and the situations so complicated, that a second or third visit is enjoyed more than the first one. Under all the surface of roaring laugh provoking scenes there are touches of pathos to relieve the strain of continuous laughter and a moral contained in its concrete illustration that a broad spirit of tolerance and love will reconcile age old antagonisms. In this play, Abie, a Jewish youth, marries Rosemary Murphy, an Irish Catholic girl, and at once lets loose the warring characteristics contained in the natures of the widely differing viewpoints of their respective fathers. That Abie and Rosie marry three times, the ceremonies being performed by a Methodist minister, a Rabbi and a priest, in a vain effort to please their fathers, affords a series of situations better imagined than described. This theme as is the case with the entire play is of course treated from a screamingly funny, humorous angle without offense to the most sensitive. Matinee performances are given Sunday, Wednesday and Saturday.

SMALL TOWN HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

By BUCK CAMPBELL

If some people were required to stand on their dignity they would have to lie down.

You can kill a man with kindness, but it is much easier to use the gun that is not loaded.

It is no trouble to make some folks believe the moon is made of green cheese, and how do you know that it is not?

Political patriots would be rather scarce if there were no salaries or opportunities for graft in the positions.

Did you ever see a red-headed, freckle-faced hobo? No! Red hair denotes long life, energy and a fierce disposition.

Beware of the man who wants to do something for you, two to one that he is looking for an opportunity to do something to you.

If you never say anything about a man that you would not say to his face, there would be a lot of mean things that would not be said.

HEADLESS HORSEMAN RIDES
Ghost Goes Forth Nightly in Sleep
Hollow in Search of Head
Lost in Battle.

The graveyard of the old Dutch church, Tarrytown, N. Y., is described by Washington Irving at the beginning of the "Legend of Sleepy Hollow." "On the Tappan Zee there lies a small market town or rural port known by the name of Tarrytown. Not far from this village there is a little valley which is one of the quietest spots in the world. A small brook glides through it, with just murmurs enough to lull one to repose."
The enchanted region of Sleepy Hollow is haunted by the apparition of a figure on horseback, who in a mythical battle had lost his head.
"Certain of the more authentic historians," continues the author, "allege that the body of the trooper having been buried in the churchyard, the ghost rides forth to the scene of battle in nightly quest of his head, and that the rushing speed with which he sometimes passes along the Hollow is owing to his being in a hurry to get back to the churchyard before day-break."
Just below the bridge flows the brook, and near the church bridge Ichabod Crane had his terrifying encounter with the headless horseman.—Detroit News.

HEAR MOANS IN MOUNTAINS
Peculiar Sounds Heard in the Chilean
Andes—Peak in England
Screams.

A deep note to be heard at certain seasons of the year proceeding from the mountain of El Bramador, in the Chilean Andes, is one of the weirdest sounds in the world. In former days the natives listened to it with superstitious fear, while even a white man, hearing it for the first time, is startled at the mountain's "powers."
Another curious mountain exists in Nevada, though this one usually gives out a note resembling at first the jingling of bells, and ending with a deep, organ-like swell.
In both cases the sounds are due to a peculiar formation of the earth, which under certain conditions of weather allows the separate particles to rub against each other and so produce uncanny effects.
In England is a mountain which howls in such a way that formerly it was supposed to be the haunt of demons. This is Cross Fell, in Westmoreland, where local conditions produce a gale with several peculiarities, including an awe-inspiring scream that at times can be heard for miles.

A Chagrined Sea Fighter.
Outside the harbor of Charlotte Amalie, on the coast of St. Thomas island, a huge rock looms out of the sea. Sail Rock it is called, and it bears a startling resemblance to a ship. As I gazed upon it, says Mr. A. Hyatt Verrill in his book "In the Wake of the Buccaneers," I could not blame the bellicose captain of a French frigate who a century and more ago sighted the rock one night and, mistaking it for a privateer, ran close and hailed it.
No response came back. Again he hailed, and as still no response came he blazed a broadside at the shadowy mass. Back came the echoing thunder of the cannonade, and the rebounding shot, falling on the frigate's deck, convinced the Frenchman that the privateer was returning his fire.
For hours the battle raged; the French runners poured broadside after broadside at the massive cliff. Not until day dawned did the deluded commander of the frigate discover his mistake. Then, crestfallen and mortified, he crept away, leaving Sail Rock unscathed and triumphant.—Youth's Companion.

He Had Stolen Her Heart.
Ellen, the cook, was of a suspicious nature. She distrusted mankind in general and banks in particular; she never banked her frugal savings. Part of her wages were hoarded in a stocking in some obscure corner of her room. Ellen's "gentleman friend" was the neighboring butcher, and the friendship had proved enduring; her mistress was not astonished when the girl announced her pending marriage.
"And I want to ask you, mum," said Ellen, "what's the best way to put my money in the bank?"
Her mistress regarded her in astonishment. "Why, Ellen, I thought you didn't believe in banks!"
"No more I do, mum," replied the girl, "but since I'm going to be married next week I kinder feel the money would be safer in the bank than in the house with a strange man about."—The Argonaut.

Fashions in Wives Vary.
Fashions in wives are not quite so capricious as fashions in clothes—they vary with decades instead of with seasons. It wasn't so long ago that the "ash-tray wife" was the most approved model of femininity. "Elizabeth" immortalizes her in "The Caravaners," we remember: "Indeed, the perfect woman does not talk at all. Who wants to hear her? All that we ask of her is that she shall listen intelligently when we wish, for a change, to tell about our own thoughts, and that she should be at hand when we want anything. Surely this is not much to ask. Matches, ash trays, and one's wife should be, so to speak, on every table; and I maintain that the perfect wife copies the conduct of the matches and the ash trays, and combines being useful with being dumb."

PERSEPHONE'S FAREWELL
The coal-black horses wait for me, I see
The migrant birds assemble in the sky;
The autumn wind is whispering thru the trees;
And all things tell me that I must depart.

Our task is done, O Mother! See the fields
Beauteous with harvest; see the branches glow
With ripening fruitage; see the purple grapes
Heavy with nectarous juices!
We have toiled
Thru many a summer day to bring to pass
This consummation of our Springtide dreams,
We helped the plowman lay his furrow straight;
Guided the sower's hand who sowed the seed;
Brooded above the tiny infant leaves,
And helped them push their way to vigorous life.
Now comes the harvest—and our task is done.

Demeter, Mother, men forget me now;
Their hearts are jubilant with harvest time;
And I were sad but for the thought of one
Who waits my coming in the Under World;
His only spring is my return to him
With scent of apple blossoms in my hair;
His only summer is my burning lips,
Red with the touch of the life-giving sun;
And sitting at his side on that dark throne
I'll tell my memories, like carven beads,
Upon a rosary, and joy his heart
Who looks to me alone for happiness.

So farewell Mother—nay, you must not weep;
It is but for a time; when cold and gloom
And bitter winds have tried the hearts of men
Till they desire me with a strong desire,
I shall return with rapture in my breast,
And spring shall beckon to the world again.

HARTMAN THEATER

Charles "Chic" Sale, typically American as corn on the cob or rhubarb pie, as his admirers aver, is to be seen at the Hartman three days beginning Monday, November 5, in Herbert Hall Winslow's new American comedy drama, "Common Sense." Mr. Sale has been a familiar figure on Columbus stages in the past, but this is the first time he has made a visit at the head of his own company. "Common Sense" is described by its author as a humorous satire on blue laws and a timely warning against their insidious effects. Painstakingly, Winslow has gathered facts about the efforts of fanatics to curtail liberty of thought, speech and action and his completed picture is no wise overdrawn or exaggerated. With the play American thru and thru, "Chic" Sale is the artist who can act it "real American." Vaudeville has already acclaimed him as great and now he is reaping new laurels as a straight comedian. His excellent supporting company includes Betty Weston, Lillian Ross, Florence Earle, Geneva Harrison, Virginia Sale, Claude Kimball, Harry English, John Keefe, Milton Nobles Jr., Charles Honnell and others. Mail orders should be sent now. There will be a matinee Wednesday.

"Good Morning Dearie" famous musical comedy, comes to the Hartman for a three day stay beginning Thursday night, November 8. Jerome Kern, who wrote the music for "Good Morning Dearie" also wrote the music for Ziegfeld's "Sally" and Edward Royce who staged it, did a like service for "Sally" and the Ziegfeld "Follies." Anna Caldwell, who wrote the book and lyrics is well known as the author of "China Chin" and all the Fred Stone shows. She has taken a story with the thrills of melodrama and made it the basis for a comedy with music that possesses surprise, fun, excitement and novelty. The big cast includes Virginia Watson, Gwendolyn Roland, Mary Diehl, Kitty Clark, Lou Powers, Roland Hogue, Edward Allen Abbott Adams, the twelve Sunbeam girls, the sensational dancers from London and a chorus of beauties and dancing boys. There will be a matinee on Saturday. Mail orders now.

CIRCLEVILLE,

A STATEMENT TO THE PEOPLE OF CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO.

To begin with, I fully recognize the fact that no person can fill the office of mayor to the entire satisfaction of all, or nearly all, the people. My idea has been to do the thing that would benefit the greatest number. I have had this in my mind when signing or vetoing ordinances passed by the city council. I have always tried my utmost to be fair and impartial in all cases tried in my court and am sure I cannot be accused of favoritism in a single case.

In 22 months of my term I have assessed $8,015.71 in fines and costs in liquor cases alone. In the same number of months just prior to my administration there was $3,129.95 assessed under same charges and the improvement in this condition is plainly visible.

In filling office by appointment I have selected the best people in my judgment for the various places namely: Mr. Huston for service director; Mr. Lyle, safety director; Mr. Ruggles, Mr. Adkins and Mr. Howard for sinking fund trustees; Mr. Folsom Mrs. Henry and Miss Moody for library board; Mrs. Gussman and Mr. Colwell for board of health; Mr. Foresman for civil service board and Mr. Caldwell, president of council. All of these are competent and trustworthy persons who take an active interest in city affairs.

H. C. RENICK, Mayor.

NOW IS TIME TO HELP.

Now that the Hinde Paper Box company has selected the site for their new Container Plant, there is no longer any reason for our people withholding their support from the project. Fibre containers are used here in very large quantities. The city is badly in need of steady employment for its people. Let everyone subscribe as they can afford and help get the good work started.

OLD HOMESTEAD FOR SALE.

The undersigned, as trustee and representative of the children and heirs at law of the late Christena Adkins, will offer for sale at public auction at the front door of the court house in the city of Circleville, Ohio,

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1923, at 2 o'clock P. M., the homestead of the late Christena Adkins, located in Wayne township, Pickaway County, Ohio, on the Circleville and Washington Turnpike (improved as State Highway No. 10.) and containing 89 acres of land, more or less.

This is one of the most valuable farms in Pickaway county, rich land, thoroly tilled, silo, 2 barns, excellent farm scales under roof, chicken house, smoke and wash house and a nine room house that is practically new. This house is as near modern as a country home can be made with Delco lighting system practically new and in good condition.

The wheat is not yet sown but expect to sow it. If sown, the heirs will turn over to the purchaser one half of the wheat sown on said lands. If purchaser desires to buy the tenant's one-half he has the privilege of doing so by paying for sowing the same. The heirs will pay the December, 1923 tax but all taxes thereafter shall be paid by the purchaser. Possession will be given to do anything on the premises that will not interfere with rights of tenant now in possession and full possession will be given March 1, 1924.

The purchaser or purchasers will be required to pay one thousand dollars on day of sale as good faith money, and the balance of purchase price within thirty days from day of sale in cash. A contract of sale will be entered into with purchaser on day of sale and when terms of sale are complied with a warranty deed for the premises, free and clear from all incumbrances will be handed purchaser, except the June tax, 1924.

If you desire an ideal home on an ideal road and very near good markets you will be interested in this sale. Come and look at it. This is a forced sale to distribute the estate of the deceased.

A Room Filled With Books.

Books are delightful society. If you go into a room filled with books—even without taking them down from their shelves, they seem to speak to you, seem to welcome you, seem to tell you that they have something inside their covers that will be good for you, and that they are willing and desirous to impart to you. Value them, and endeavor to turn them to account.—W. E. Gladstone.

Folly Came Home to Him.

When Charles V abdicated his throne and retired to the monastery of St. Juste, he amused himself by trying to learn watchmaking. After some time he remarked one day: "What an egregious fool must I have been to have squandered so much blood and treasure in an absurd attempt to make men think alike, when I cannot even make a few watches keep time together."

Tabloid Tax Talks

INCREASE OF TAXES.

By JOHN B. DEMPSEY, Cleveland.

UNDER the existing law the average rate in Ohio has increased from 10½ mills in 1911 to more than 21½ mills in 1922. The increase in three years from 1919 to 1922 averaged more than 2 mills a year.

It is proposed in the Taft law that we impose a 14 mill limit outside of municipalities and a 17 mill limit within municipalities. Taken together with a repeal of state levy, this is a net increase in the rural districts of about 2 mills, and a possible increase in the cities of about 1 mill over the 15 mill limit. As a matter of fact, however, there is no 15 mill limit in the Smith law today. There are at least four exceptions to this limit which may be made without vote of the people, one of which, for public libraries, amounts to 1½ mills, so that at least 16½ mills may be levied today, in addition to levies for forests and some other luxuries.

Debt charges on bonds issued after this time are excluded by the Taft law from the current expense limit, while those which are now within the so-called 15 mill limit remain within the new limit. Under the old law new debt charges were first included within the limit, but after this policy had reduced the amount of money available for current expenses for several years and resulted in great sums being borrowed to pay current deficits, the debt charges were, in most cases, excluded in 1920, and are excluded today. If they had been excluded from the beginning, we would have less debt and less taxes at the present time. The exclusion of future sinking fund and interest levies will not materially affect our rate in the cities because most of such charges are excluded already.

Taking the Taft act as a whole, it can be said that there will be no average increase of taxes throughout the state, even though the budget commission allows the limit, except where debt is increased by the building of public improvements faster than the old debt is being paid off. In a broader sense this law means an ultimate decrease in taxes. It establishes a pay-as-you-go policy. It will check the rapid increase in public debt which resulted from the Smith law. The whole story of the new law is to limit expense. That means the taxes will look after themselves. A limit which is so strict that a sincere public official can not possibly keep his budget within the limit defeats its own purpose, runs the cities and schools into debt and results ultimately in higher taxes.

Today a large part of our tax is devoted to paying debts which should have been paid from current revenue many years ago. Under this law the budget commission is authorized to consider all the income and fix the total amount which may be spent by each subdivision instead of merely fixing the taxes.

Tabloid Tax Talks

LIMITATION OF EXPENDITURES.

By JOHN M. VORYS, Columbus.

NO ONE denies that the present tax limitation laws in Ohio are so confused that they can not be understood, so arbitrary that they can not be varied to meet local conditions in any county, and so ineffective that they have not limited either taxes or debts. As long ago as June, 1922, a committee was appointed by the Ohio Tax association, a non-partisan group interested solely in the study of taxation problems, to revise the tax limitation and distribution laws.

John M. Vorys.

The committee had representatives of taxpayers, city and county officials, urban and rural schools and other groups interested in the subject, and had every expert assistance. The bill prepared by this committee was introduced in the Ohio legislature in January, 1923, by Robert A. Taft. In accordance with suggestions made, 30 amendments were adopted. The bill was passed by the legislature by more than a three-fifths vote, and re-passed over the veto of Governor Donahey.

More study was devoted to this subject than to any other by the legislature, and it was passed only because the members were satisfied that it represented a substantial improvement on the existing law and was based on sound principles of taxation.

In short, the Taft tax law is a sincere effort to provide a permanent system of tax limitation, based on sound principles and supported by those men who have given the subject a close and careful study.

In Memoriam.
Editor Union-Herald:—Mrs. Luella Prindle was born in Robtown February 14, 1868, and departed this life October 29, 1923, aged 55 years, eight months and 15 days.

She was united in marriage to Elmer Prindle May 20, 1888, and to this union were born nine children, five daughters and four sons; Johnie, Owen, Avery and Clyde preceded their mother in death.

Mrs. Prindle united with the United Brethren church at Robtown when a young girl, then in later life she and her husband joined the M. E. church at Darbyville, to which church she was a member until her death.

Our dear sister's sufferings have been of long durations and more than any of us can understand; but she bore it bravely and had been heard to say many, many times, she was ready and willing to go when God was ready to take her.

She was a good kind-hearted neighbor, a very indulgent mother. One thing especially that impressed the writer of the life of our departed sister was in all her conversations, "Her children was her first and main thought" always trying to plan for their good.

There are left to mourn their loss a kind and faithful husband, an aged mother, five daughters; Elizabeth, wife of Otto Bethards; Anna, wife of William Freice; Stella, wife of Ambrose Moul; Myrtle at home and Rosella, who just recently graduated from Grant hospital; also five grandchildren, two sisters and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held from the Methodist Episcopal church at Darbyville conducted by Rev. D. S. Mills. Interment was in the Muhlenberg cemetery.

REFORM BY FORCE.

I do not remember my first lie, it is too far back; but I remember my second one very well. I was nine days old at the time and had noticed that if a pin was sticking in me and I advertised it in the usual fashion. I was lovingly petted and coddled and pitied in a most agreeable way and got a ration between meals besides. It was human nature to want to get these riches, and I fell. I lied about the pin—advertising one when there was not any. During the first half of my life I never knew a child that was able to rise above that temptation and keep from telling that lie. Up to 1867 all the civilized children that were ever born into the world were liars. Then the safety-pin came in and blocked the game. But is that reform worth anything? No; for it is reform by force and has no virtue in it; it merely stops that form of lying, it doesn't impair the disposition to lie, by a shade. It is the cradle application of conversion by fire and sword, or of the temperance principle thru prohibition.—Mark Twain.

BUS LINES

Failed to Meet Requirements When Street Car Service Was Withdrawn
News stories recording the failures of "jitney" competition with electric railways, urban and interurban, are common. Some of these have been as wholly failures in a transportation sense as they have been financially. Yet, one important fact has been established that jitneys in cooperation with electric railways are important factors in the economy of transportation. As competitors both, often, are losers.

The latest confirmation of this comes from Saginaw, Michigan. There was made one of the most notably radical attempts to substitute motor busses for street railways. Every opposition that radical ingenuity could devise was imposed on the railroad company. Restrictions were put upon service requirements and unrestricted bus competition was encouraged in every way. Increase of fares to meet the higher operating expenses, incident to the war and post-war periods, were denied without hearing. The result was that in 1921 the street railway company was driven into bankruptcy amid the clamoring rejoicing of the radical faction.

But, when the street car wheels had ceased to turn, the city began to awaken to what it had done. The busses failed miserably to meet the emergency. Some of them failed financially. Transportation facilities became inadequate. The situation became so intolerable and was so rapidly becoming worse, that an ordinance recently was approved giving a franchise for electric railway service with bus auxiliaries, just as the old company had offered to operate under. A difference is that the franchise provides that there shall be no bus competition and that the new fare shall be ten cents, instead of five as formerly. Thus is the company now safeguarded against the factors which accomplished ruin two years ago. Thus has Saginaw learned a lesson in the expensive school of experience. Other cities can take warning, some of them in Ohio.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"That makes me sick," exclaimed the House Detective.

"I don't know!" the Hotel Stenographer debated.

"Those little Pomeranian dogs are not so bad. Women who own them are never haunted by the fear that they will grow up and look like their father."

"A woman has to have something to cuddle, Kelly. Now that babies are not fashionable a little woolly dog is as good as anything."

"It takes a man so much time to earn a living these days, what with the high cost of having a wife, that a woman never sees very much of her husband. One of these little dogs makes a pretty good substitute."

"They are generally nasty tempered little brutes and snap at everything that does not please them. They are picky about their meals and growl if disturbed while eating. They have to be forced into the bathtub and would rather slip out and roll in the dirt than to be dressed up in a ribbon and lie on a cushion in the parlor."

"So they remind married women of their husbands a lot, Kelly. They have one big advantage over a husband, too. You can lock them in the basement when you are bored with them, but with a husband that is not done in the best circles."

"Of course, they can't put up much of a fight, but then, the average man is like that. He will submit to anything from headwaiters, traffic cops and ticket sellers with no more than a few low growls which he is careful not to let those fellows hear."

"You don't think much of men!" said Kelly.

"It isn't that," answered the girl. "But I like dogs."

AMUSEMENTS

George Melford's latest Paramount picture production, "You Can't Fool Your Wife," which was shown at the Met theater yesterday was hailed as one of the best of the current season.

Between manipulating deals in the stock market and making flying trips to and from Nassau in a flying boat, Lewis Stone, a featured player in the leading man's role, is kept busy throughout the course of the picture. Leatrice Loy, also a featured player with Nita Naldi and Pauline Garon, plays the role of the confiding wife, who fancies, evidence supplied by her flirtatious husband, that her trust is misplaced. She unexpectedly effects a reunion with her husband thus bringing to a happy climax one of the most interesting and cleverly conceived picture stories ever seen on the screen of this theater.

In support of the leading players is a splendid cast, including Paul McAllister, John Daly Murphy, Julia Swayne Gordon, Tom Carrigan and Dan Pennell. The scenario was written by Waldemar Young. The picture is as thrilling as it is entertaining and is well worth seeing.
